Prepare your Resume

• Have someone proof your resume
• Have multiple copies prepared
• Focus on computer skills, internships, relevant academic/capstone project or volunteer experience
• Know your resume
Prepare your Resume

• Carry your proofread resume in a professional portfolio or folder

• Resumes DO NOT get you the job
  ○ they get you the interview - so, Market Yourself!
Rehearse

• An introduction is a must

• Include:
  o Introduction of yourself (major, graduation date)
  o Knowledge of company
  o Express interest in the company and/or opportunities o Tell what you can offer
Preparing your Elevator Speech

Making Your First Impression
• 60 – 65% of communication to others is non-verbal communication

Tips for Non-verbal communication for an introduction
• Dress professionally
• Give a firm handshake
• Make good eye contact and Smile
• If wearing nametag, wear on your right side for easy readability
• Speak clearly
• Listen carefully for names when introduced Be Strategic

• Have a top 5-10 list of companies you would like to meet
• Don’t visit your top company first
• Start from the bottom and work your way up o You will be better prepared and well rehearsed
Refine

• Use the person’s name
• Say “Thank You”
• Move on if there is a long line
• Make your own positive impression – Do not cruise the booths with friends
• Be respectful
  o Don’t just grab goodies!
Requests

• Request information by asking intelligent questions that demonstrate your knowledge:
  o What type of training programs do you offer new employees?
  o Describe the work environment of your company.

• Collect business cards

• Ask:
  o Who the best contact person is?
  o What is the next step is?

• Make notes about your conversation

• Send a thank you

Follow-up!    Follow-up!    Follow-up!
Remember

• Explore options. You can’t tell what a company has to offer by simply looking at their name

• Successful candidates will find a match regardless of what positions a company currently has “advertised”

• ‘Don’t put all of your eggs in one basket’; continue the job search through various avenues
Relax

• Relax and be yourself

• Enjoy the opportunity to meet new people and build your network
