

Dr. Anthony DiLollo
2009 Young Faculty Scholar
Wichita State University

University of Memphis alumnus and assistant professor in the Department of Communication Sciences and Disorders, Dr. Anthony “Tony” DiLollo (PhD ‘01) was named the Wichita State University “Young Faculty Scholar” for 2009.

The award, established by the Wichita State University's Board of Trustees in 1988, recognizes faculty members who are between their third and eighth year of service and have records of excellence in teaching performance and substantial achievement in research and/or creative activity.

Tony shares his success with the many colleagues with whom he has worked over the years, not only those with whom he has published, but those who have inspired him to think in new ways and look in new directions.

Tony shares that his “success started with my doctoral education at the University of Memphis, where my mentor, Dr. Walt Manning, not only taught me about stuttering, but also about being a scholar. The many hours we spent in his office just talking - ranging from topic to topic and learning how to ‘think’ like a scholar - continue to be some of the most influential and enjoyable memories of my academic development.

“To me, [the Young Faculty Scholar Award] is as much a testament to the quality of the doctoral program in the School of Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology as it is to anything extraordinary that I bring to the table.”

Please join the School of Audiology & Speech-Language Pathology at the U of M in celebrating Tony’s accomplishments!
