ON THE COVER
This is an exciting time for the Fogelman College of Business & Economics. Next year is the centenary of the University, an historic moment that gives us all call to reflect on where we are, and where we are going as an institution and college. For those of us in the FCBE, the last year has seen several accomplishments that are helping to cement our role in delivering a high quality education for our students. Notable among these have been the continued establishment of Fogelman Promise, a collection of initiatives that are helping with the professional, social and physical development of our students. Further, we have seen some important changes to our academic programs. At the undergraduate level, we have restructured several programs and added to our course offerings in several areas, notably in the School of Accountancy and Department of Management Information Systems, and in the general shift across the College to online delivery. For example, the College’s Management, Marketing, and MIS majors can now be completed fully face-to-face or online or in a face-to-face/online combination; Accounting, Finance and Supply Chain Management will have similar offerings in the upcoming semesters. We also have created several new MBA programs, most recently our joint program with the University of Tennessee Health Sciences Center to offer a specialized Health-Systems Pharmacy EMBA, something that you can read about later in this magazine.

The changes that are outlined above, in conjunction with the all-round performances among our faculty and staff in providing a very high level of education for students of all levels, led to a very successful accreditation visit by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business, or AACSB. This is our major accrediting body, and one whose stamp of approval is vital to the country’s leading business schools. Thanks to the exceptional leadership work carried out by Lloyd Brooks, Tom Miller, Jasbir Dhaliwal and Carolyn Callahan, along with tremendous support from the entire faculty and staff, we approached this event with excitement at the opportunity to demonstrate to the site visit team what we do. I am delighted to be able to report that the process went very well, and that our accreditation was affirmed for another five years, the maximum period possible. You can read more about this event elsewhere in the Fogelman Focus.

In conjunction with preparing for the AACSB accreditation visit and the program developments across the College outlined above, we have also been laying the groundwork for our next phase of development. This is an extremely important process that will reinforce our continued efforts to position ourselves as a leading urban business school. There are three facets to this.

On November 16 2010, some of the FCBE’s key external partners came together in the Fogelman Executive Center. In addition to attending a reception at which we were able to thank them for their previous help with, and commitment to, our College, they also participated in an idea generation session. Situated at round tables in small groups, those who took part were asked to come up with ideas that would propel the College through its next phase of development. Two major themes emerged from this session facilitated by the Chair of the FCBE’s Advisory Board, Larry Papasan. First, there was a lot of consensus around developing a new Professional Development center that would help cater for the pastoral side of student development. Included in the center would be everything from student advising to internship placement to career counseling. I am delighted to say that this initiative has been given an enormous boost thanks to the generosity of one of our long time benefactors, Avron Fogelman. Avron has given the College $1.25 million to provide the initial financing for what will be called the Avron B. Fogelman Center for Professional Career Development. This is the latest in a long line of support that the College has received from the Fogelman family, most recently the $2 million gift to support the College’s developments in sustainable real estate. I am extremely grateful to Avron and the Fogelman family; there is more on the creation of the Avron B. Fogelman Center for Professional Career Development later in the Focus.

The second suggestion to emerge concerned enhancing the FCBE’s brand. In a 21st century setting with 24 hour a day access to information across a broad range of media devices, it was felt that we could promote the College in more and more innovative ways. This in turn would help enhance the reputation of the College and position it to continue to move forward as a leading urban College of Business & Economics. These two initiatives will be major foci of our plans for development in the immediate future. They are joined by a third major development idea that emerged from the regular coffee hours that I have with our faculty. This concerns the need to improve the infrastructure of the building in which we operate. In addition to HVAC work, there is also a need to renovate several of our classrooms. Further, we are also embarking on a project to make the building more sustainable. You will be hearing more about these three initiatives in the weeks ahead as we push on to make the FCBE

Professional Development

A key component of the second phase of development is to further cement the Fogelman Promise initiative, and to expand the provision of services to students in a way that will put the College on a par with the offerings of the leading business schools in the country. “We want this to be an end-to-end process, from recruiting good high school students all the way up to placing them,” says Fogelman Dean Dr. Rajiv Grover. “And we want to develop these students all the way along. Generally speaking, employers are satisfied with the marketing, finance, accounting knowledge our students are receiving. What they want is for our students to be professionally developed.”

The University has a Center for Student Development, and Fogelman College leaders stress that the College’s own center would not be designed to take its place. Rather, the College hopes to coordinate its program with the university’s efforts, or, as Grover puts it, to “stand on the shoulders of giants.”

“We want to build something specialized,” says Dr. Thomas Miller, Associate Dean for Administration.

This vision has received a significant boost with the announcement of a major gift to the College from local real estate entrepreneur Avron Fogelman. The $1.25 million gift will create the Avron B. Fogelman Center for Professional Career Development that will be the home of extra-curricular activities and programs including student recruitment, mentoring, internships, career counseling, job placement, business ethics, professionalism training, physical wellness, corporate field... trips, career fair days, and personal and interpersonal skill enhancement. These include the activities described above that have already been launched under the Fogelman Promise banner. The creation of the new Avron B. Fogelman Center for Professional Career Development will ensure the sustainability of these programs, and allow them to become even more impactful on the development of students within the College.

“These products have been launched, but they’re all in the nascent stage,” Grover says. “We don’t have financial backing for them. We’ve embarked on all these ventures in a bootstrapping kind of fashion, add-ons to people’s regular responsibilities. And in part, we are looking for ways to sustain them, to maintain and enhance them.

“We want to put the program on a firm financial footing.”

The creation of the Avron B. Fogelman Center for Professional Career Development, adds Dr. Jasbir Dhaliwal, Associate Dean of Research & Academic Programs, represents a key opportunity for the College to realize its full potential. “Our students are hungry and driven to succeed, but they need guidance.”

Fogelman Promise is not required of all students. Students will participate in the program on a voluntary basis and attain rewards that go beyond the additional training the program will provide. Those rewards could include special recognition at graduation, unique internship opportunities and visible recognition on the College’s walls.

Businesses who hire Fogelman Promise graduates also will reap the program’s benefits. Essentially, when a company hires a Fogelman Promise graduate, it will know that it’s gaining an employee who has earned the college’s seal of approval.

“We want to promote this ‘business ready’ concept to companies out there so when they see it on a resume, they know this student is worth talking to,” Grover says. “It’s a Good Housekeeping seal for our companies and for our students.”

College Branding

The second component of the new phase of development is to enhance the positioning of the College’s brand, locally, nationally and internationally.

According to Dhaliwal, “We want to move to Fogelman 2.0.”

Once the key parts of the student development initiative are in place, the College intends to bring onboard a marketing professional who can work in tandem with the University’s PR and marketing teams to develop and promote the College’s new identity.

“We need somebody who can host events, work with the media, help us develop our brand,” Grover says. “We might be able to do 90 percent of the conceptual work ourselves, but she or he will need to provide 100% of the final execution."

Building Sustainability

In addition to the steps outlined above, there is also a need to redevelop the Fogelman building. Most critically, the College is looking to improve its heating and cooling systems, while becoming more sustainable.

“The building has served us very well, but in 40 years, it needs some help,” says Miller, who has been with the school since its inception in 1971. “The HVAC system, in terms of the environment for learning, is huge. It’s central to the experience here.”

In the heat of summer, students enter classrooms that are frequently sweltering; in the winter, they are often seen wearing jackets and gloves. At other times the opposite is true; faculty offices could be very hot in the middle of winter or freezing cold in the middle of summer such that the conditions require windows to be open. College administrators would like to see changes implemented that not only fix those problems for faculty and students, but also make the building more eco-friendly.

Kenneth Siegfried, Fogelman’s senior director of development, notes that the College’s former visiting Martha and Robert Fogelman Chair of Excellence in Sustainable Real Estate, Grant Thrall, has conducted tours with two LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certified architects who have studied the possibility of making the building more environmentally friendly, including incorporating solar panels into the structure.

“We want our building to become sustainable, to be energy efficient,” Siegfried says.

Fogelman’s Future

The second phase of development for the Fogelman College of Business & Economics will build on the momentum already generated in the College to create new opportunities for students and new support for the Greater Memphis business community. The key to the project, of course, is funding. “There’s less and less state funding for higher education, which means there’s more and more we’re having to do on our own,” Miller notes.

In addition to the generous donation from Avron Fogelman, College administrators recognize that several more million dollars will be needed to bring the Phase 2 vision to completion. This is seen as investment that will not only allow the continued development of the College, but also is seen as a necessary tool for Fogelman College to compete in an increasingly competitive marketplace.

"This is the way all business schools are moving," says Dr. John Amis, Associate Professor of Management. “This is positioning us to offer the same opportunities as the leading business schools in the U.S.”

Add Grover: “When we get this done, we’ll be playing with the big schools.”

For more information about these planned developments, please contact Dean Rajiv Grover at rgrover@memphis.edu.

Story by Stacey Wiedower
February 20-22, 2011, the Fogelman College of Business & Economics hosted an accreditation visit by a Peer Review Team representing The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business – International (AACSB), the premier accrediting agency for business schools. The College was up for its five-year Maintenance of Accreditation Review for both business and accounting accreditation. Peer Review Team members were Dean H. Fenwick Huss, Georgia State University (Business Team Chair); Dr. Mary Stone, University of Alabama (Accounting Team Chair); Dean Robert Scherer, Cleveland State University (Business Team Member); and Dr. Gerald Lobo, University of Houston (Accounting Team Member).

In December 2010, the College completed extensive reports for the AACSB that summarized the activities related to its business and accounting programs over the last five years, and the qualifications and accomplishments of the faculty. These documents were reviewed in detail by the team and AACSB staff prior to the team visit. The AACSB maintenance review is not a standard-by-standard review of the 21 accreditation standards. Rather, it is a critical assessment by the Peer Review Team of the overall quality of Fogelman academic programs in relation to accreditation standards for strategic management, students and faculty, and assurance of learning. In addition, the team assessed the extent to which the College has effective processes in place to continuously maintain and improve academic programs through peer review and self-evaluation.

During the Peer Review Team’s intensive campus visit, members met with many groups of faculty, including some key College committees, faculty leaders of various academic programs and initiatives, and President Shirley Raines and Provost Ralph Faudree. In addition, the team met with many College alumni and friends at a reception at the home of University of Memphis alumni, George and Betty Johnson.

Thanks to the outstanding work of all of the College’s staff and faculty, and in particular the outstanding leadership of Lloyd Brooks, Tom Miller, Jasbir Dhaliwal, and Carolyn Callahan, the accreditation visit went exceedingly well. Accreditation was confirmed for the next five years, the maximum term, affirming the College’s place as the leading provider of graduate and undergraduate business education in the region.

community colleges, doctoral and research universities, and master’s universities and colleges, were honored at a luncheon in Washington, D.C., in November, followed by a Congressional reception. “This is beyond amazing,” Dr. Heath said. “This award is only given once every two years and is sponsored by one of the most respected organizations associated with education, so to be recognized with such a prestigious award is very humbling.”

Dr. Shirley Raines, president of the University of Memphis and the person who nominated Dr. Heath for the award, said, “Dr. Julie Heath is exactly the kind of professor whom the Carnegie/CASE awards seek to honor. In my nomination to the judging panels, I cited the engaged scholarship that she has provided locally and in cooperation with the state of Tennessee and First Tennessee Bank in the area of financial literacy. While her work with financial literacy has been recognized, it is her dedication to her students and to her profession that makes her such an extraordinary representative of the many outstanding professors who teach, research, and serve at the University of Memphis. Hers is a well-deserved award.”

In addition to teaching undergraduate and graduate classes, Dr. Heath is the Director of the Center for Economic Education at the University of Memphis. In that role, with the support of the state of Tennessee and First Tennessee, she initiated the Smart Tennessee program, which teaches financial literacy to children in elementary, middle, and high schools across the state. Since its inception in 2006, the program has been adopted by more than 400 schools and has taught more than 75,000 children.

Dr. Heath is the recipient of a number of other honors and awards, including the economics discipline’s highest award, the Kenneth G. Elzinga Distinguished Teaching Award, and the Educator of the Year Award from the National Association for Financial Literacy, both in 2008, and the University’s Distinguished Teaching Award in 2010.

MBA DEVELOPMENTS

The Fogelman College of Business and Economics’ MBA programs have experienced several changes over the last year. In addition to the launching of an integrated Graduate Programs Office that centralizes and rationalizes the operating processes for all its MBA programs, faculty and staff have built upon recent curriculum changes with alterations to program formats and new degree offerings.

Our flagship Executive MBA program, which is celebrating its 30th intake this year, has been the focus of structural changes that include the elimination of Friday classes and the offering of some courses on-line, moves intended to open up the program to those who have to work five days a week. We have also made the program more intensive and compact with a reduction in program length from 21 months to 17 months, which brings us more in line with our competitors. Marketing efforts have been renewed with additional emphasis on recruiting executives from family businesses and the health care sector.

A new Executive MBA for Health-System Pharmacy is being launched in Fall 2011 in partnership with the University of Tennessee College of Pharmacy. Designed to meet a national shortage in the field, this program will be offered through residency weeks and on-line courses, and is intended to draw students from across the country.

The Professional MBA program continues to grow with the introduction in Fall 2010 of a new concentration, again in conjunction with the UT College of Pharmacy, of a Pharmacy Practice Management concentration. Students enrolled in the PharmD program at the University of Tennessee may now earn a MBA concurrently from the University of Memphis. Students admitted to our College will complete the MBA core courses in addition to 15 hours of pharmacy practice management courses developed for those individuals interested in learning about managing large pharmacy operations. Elective courses are offered both at the University of Memphis and the UT College of Pharmacy.

The Customer-Driven MBA program is the nation’s only full-time, tuition-paid, corporate-sponsored MBA program with a paid internship – uniquely designed to emphasize specific industry needs. By partnering with Memphis-based corporations, including AutoZone, FedEx, International Paper, Medtronic, Smith & Nephew, and Wright Medical, the College can offer high-caliber students the opportunity to obtain an industry-centered graduate education with internships and full-time employment upon successful completion of the degree and internship.

With enrollments increasing by 11% in Fall 2010 from the previous year, and the changes outlined above, the MBA programs are well positioned to continue as the flagship offerings of the FCBE.

FOGELMAN COLLEGE HOSTS
‘CONFERENCE ON SUSTAINABLE REAL ESTATE’

The new sustainable real estate program headquartered in the Fogelman College of Business Department of Finance Insurance and Real Estate (FIR), was introduced to the University and Mid South community on Thursday March 24 and Friday March 25, 2011, with the first annual Conference on Sustainable Real Estate (COSRE). Over 100 people attended various events, including Thursday’s dinner jointly hosted by COSRE and the Economic Club of Memphis. Chris Leinberger one of the nation’s top 100 urbanists was the keynote speaker. Leinberger’s talk addressed the key question, “Why Do We Care About Sustainable Real Estate Development?” At the dinner, FedEx was the recipient of the first annual “Green Hard Hat” award in recognition for its continued efforts in developing more environmentally friendly and sustainable practices tied to its buildings and vehicles. Dean Rajiv Grover presented the award following an introduction and justification for the award by Dr. Grant Thrall, former visiting Martha and Robert Fogelman Family Chair of Excellence in Sustainable Real Estate. Friday involved a day-long symposium on sustainable real estate development and best practices.

The Martha and Robert Fogelman Family Foundation provided start-up funding for the sustainable real estate program with a gift of $2 million. The gift, among other things, provided for the creation of a Chair of Excellence in Sustainable Real Estate, and community outreach via the annual COSRE.

The topics covered at the first COSRE were chosen to highlight the various topics of expertise that students of Sustainable Real Estate will master, and to provide examples of the job opportunities that will be available to them. In attendance were recent university graduates employed in strategic market analysis and development at headquarters of AutoZone, Advance AutoParts, and PetSmart (Joshua Williams, Amie Dickinson, Lawrence Joseph).

Another feature of the conference was a case study created specifically for the 2011 COSRE. Faculty of the FIR program participated with expert LEED engineers to create a design to update or replace the current HVAC (heating, ventilation, air conditioning) system of the Fogelman Administration Building and Fogelman Classroom Building. The study was then considered for three hours by FIR faculty, the Dean, experts from the community, and members of the Fogelman College of Business and FIR Boards of Directors. This case study was a pilot study for updating the current HVAC.

The Conference on Sustainable Real Estate was organized by Professor Grant Thrall. For more information, please contact the new Martha and Robert Fogelman Family Chair of Excellence in Sustainable Real Estate, Professor Steven Bourassa at 901.678.5930.

DEPARTMENTAL UPDATES

School of Accountancy

Over the last few months, Fogelman College of Business and Economics and the School of Accountancy (SOA) has been very involved in culminating operational events associated with evaluation and revision of the curriculum, faculty procedures, student processes and academic programs in anticipation of The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) accreditation team’s February campus visit. The SOA has unique status and responsibilities as one of the 175 accounting schools in the United States to be separately accredited from its business school. The AACSB accreditation accounting standards confer institutional quality and are used to evaluate a school’s mission, operations, faculty qualifications and contributions, and other critical areas that enhance program delivery to students. The campus visit was an outstanding success, leading to the SOA being fully accredited for another maximum five-year period.

In preparation for the review, the School of Accountancy actively involved faculty, advisory board business leaders, students and staff in curriculum revisions. The curriculum improvements were implemented by a dedicated accounting faculty facing budget constraints, increasing enrollment and other challenges.

This year, the School of Accountancy is proud to have yet another instructor, Charlene Spiceland, recognized for outstanding teaching credentials. Charlene received the University’s Briggs Award for outstanding undergraduate teaching.

In addition to our teaching responsibilities, the School of Accountancy has research responsibilities and aspirations. An increasing number of our faculty are presenting their work at national and international accounting conferences as well as seeking nationally recognized publications. For example, Shana Hong, a first year assistant professor, will present her research work on the economic impact of mandated international accounting standards at the European Accounting Association Congress 2011 in Rome, Italy in late April.

The School of Accountancy has always enjoyed a reputation for outstanding service to the college, university, the community and profession. Currently Dr. John Malloy and his tax students are continuing to provide free tax services to the underserved in the Memphis community through the VITA Program. Our students are not only solid community volunteers through VITA and Beta Alpha Psi, they continue to enjoy great accounting job placements and accolades from the business community for completing their CPA certifications during their residency at the University of Memphis due to an enhancement in our Masters curriculum, led by Dr. David Spiceland.

Professor Carolyn M. Callahan, Chair cmcllan@memphis.edu

Department of Economics

The Economics Department continues to be recognized for the excellence of its teaching. Last spring Dr. Julia Heath received the University Distinguished Teaching Award; before that she received the Elzinga Award for Teaching from the Southern Economic Association. Now she has received yet another national award for her teaching. Last fall, as you will have read about earlier in the magazine, she was named the top professor in Tennessee – not just in Economics, but across all disciplines – by the Carnegie Foundation.

Our students also are making headlines. Terrance Garret, for example, is an outstanding student who is completing his major in Economics, with a minor in Biology. He intends to specialize in environmental law, an area where he can apply his knowledge of both economics and biology.

Another two of our majors, Louis Tomayako and Jasmine Jackson, presented their research project, “The Core Drivers of Excessive Prescription Drug Use and Expenditures in the State of Tennessee: A County-Level Investigation,” at the University’s “Works in Progress” Symposium this fall. The work was completed under the direction of Dr. Albert Okunade as part of the requirements for the Honors section of Principles of Microeconomics, ECON 2120. They were selected to present their research at the 2011 National Conference on Undergraduate Research in New York.

We take pride in working with our students. For example, Dr. Albert Okunade has been instrumental in recent changes to the FCBF Honors Society, of which Jasmine Jackson is the newly elected president. There are more and more Honors students in our major.

In addition, the Giffen Club, the club for economics majors, has been resuscitated. Its new President is Dan Albright and its faculty advisor, Dr. Doug Campbell. The Club is regularly hosting seminars by nationally known speakers. Recently, for example, it brought in Dr. Andrew Zimbalist, a famous expert on sports economics.

Department of Finance, Insurance & Real Estate

Exciting things are happening in Real Estate at the University of Memphis. As of Fall 2010, all five undergraduate real estate classes are now available online. The advantage that online classes provide is flexibility - “anytime / anywhere”. The Department is also planning to offer online the last two years of the B.B.A. in Finance with a Real Estate Concentration beginning Fall 2011. We also offer a six class Professional Real Estate Certificate. This certificate does not require pursuit of a degree at the University of Memphis. Classes in this program can be taken online or on campus. Further, our master’s degree in Real Estate also now has several classes being offered online.

A student team from the Department of Finance, Insurance and Real Estate reached Midsouth’s Investment Research Challenge’s (IRC) winning student team from the Fogelman College of Business & Economics advanced to the Americas regional quarterfinals of the Global IRC to compete with 40 other winning teams. More than 2,500 students from more than 500 universities worldwide participated in the IRC. This year’s event, held in Omaha, featured Mr. Warren Buffett with whom students engaged directly in discussions about investment strategies. The picture shows Mr. Buffett with Tyler Stafford, an MSBA (Finance) student. Other team members included Sonal Kukreja, Bradley Heil, and John-Michael Clowers accompanied by faculty adviser Prof. P. K. Jain.
the final of the most prestigious competition in investment – the CFA Institute’s Global Investment. The four members of the team (Sonal Kukreja, Bradley Heil, Tyler Stafford, and John-Michael Clowers), selected by Associate Professor P. K. Jain, beat six other universities including the University of Arkansas and Texas A&M, and advanced to the national competition in Omaha, Nebraska, which featured a group meeting with Warren Buffett. Also, students in the TVA investment club led by James McDonnell, YingYing Song and Olena Nikolsko-Rzhevska competed with 24 other universities at the TVA Portfolio Investment Challenge. Students manage a $400,000 portfolio and have showed their prowess by beating the S&P 500 index.

The Financial Management Association student chapter has had presentations in recent meetings from Dr. Grant Thrall on the topic of Sustainable Real Estate and Jason Herrington, managing director at Shoemaker Financial, on the Financial Planning process.

Finally, our faculty have been active in several ways. Associate Professor P.K. Jain has co-authored a paper in the prestigious Journal of Financial and Quantitative Analysis, and has been invited to serve as an associate editor of the Financial Review. Professor C.S. Pyun was a keynote speaker at the Conference on International Financial Centers, in Busan, Korea. Also faculty and students from the University of Memphis, Professors Evans, Guschke, Spahr, Sunderman and Thrall; Assistant Professors Kumar and Moore; and Ph.D. student Radetskiy, will be presenting the second most papers of any university at the upcoming American Real Estate Conference.

Kemmons Wilson School Of Hospitality And Resort Management

The Kemmons Wilson School of Hospitality and Resort Management continues to be engaged in several exciting initiatives as it continues to position itself as a prominent institution in the local, national and international hospitality and resort industries. For example, the spring semester began with the Kemmons Wilson School benefitting from the proceeds of the 6th Annual Trivia Night held in early February put on by the Metropolitan Memphis Hotel & Lodging Association and Skal International Memphis. Ten students worked at the event and enjoyed their interaction with local hospitality managers and employees. This was quickly followed by the School’s Career Day at which students attended industry panels and speaker presentations.

Ten student members of the campus Chapter of the National Society of Minorities in Hospitality attended the association’s annual conference in Atlanta. During the conference, students attended workshops and presentations on career development and corporate job opportunities. The last day of the conference was devoted to job interviews. Several of the seniors on the trip received and accepted job opportunities with companies such as Four Seasons and Disney. Other students secured internships for the summer. A total of nine students – five hospitality majors and four International MBA students – participated in the Kemmons Wilson School Panama Spring Break International Business Experience in partnership with the Panama International Hotel School. The students received lectures on Panama’s economy, leadership, and went on several cultural excursions.

The School also recently completed another successful Kemmons Wilson Week. Each March, the School honors Kemmons Wilson for his vision, demonstrated leadership and service. This year’s distinguished speaker was Don Harrill, President and Chief Executive Officer of Orange Lake Resorts. As part of the celebration, the School holds ice cream socials each afternoon for four days. The week ended with a meeting of the Kemmons Wilson School Executive Board of Advisors.

Finally, students enrolled in the School’s Advanced Resort and Lodging Management class will be attending the American Resort Development Association Annual Conference in Orlando. Several special sessions are devoted to student groups from seven different universities and included professional development sessions and educational seminars on the timeshare industry.

Department of Management

Since the last newsletter, the Management faculty have been highly involved in all aspects of campus and academic life. Barbara Davis has spearheaded the Business Etiquette program that has now nearly doubled in size since it’s initial offering last year while Catherine Green has been visiting extra classes and offering additional lectures on this topic. Kimberlee Keef started four chapters of Toastmasters and was a key figure in coordinating the regional Toastmaster’s conference. John Amis has again been coordinating the College’s 4-C’s initiative. Ben Kedia continues to carry the mantle with our International Business programs and I am in the fourth year of Directing the Memphis Institute for Leadership Education (MILE) Leadership Mentoring Program: 66 new mentor/protégé pairs began the program and are about to receive their certificates in April. As a result of these programs our students are gaining some of the best possible experiences we can offer to help their transitions into varied business settings.

Much of the faculty effort within the Management Department has revolved around the rollout of the new on-line Management major. We started with three new courses in the fall term and have three additional classes this spring. Carol Danehower, Kelly Mollica and Laura Alderson have taken the lead in coordinating the offerings, and our instructor-level faculty are providing most of the on-line instruction. We had a luncheon on March 18 to honor the tremendous efforts of those who carry much of the teaching load within the department.

The research-oriented faculty have been highly active as well. David Allen, Peter Wright, John Amis, and Frances Fabian have turned out A/A+ level publications, while Chuck Pierce’s recent A+ level article was recognized as one of the top five publications in the field of Human Resource Management. Rabi Bhagat co-edited yet another book in his specialty area of cross-cultural management. Several faculty have been asked to serve on the editorial boards of the top journals in our field. Even the doctoral students have gotten in on the action, with no fewer than five current students having papers accepted at the prestigious Academy of Management Conference scheduled for August, 2011. Finally, the Department hosted two outstanding scholars who provided talks to faculty and doctoral students: Professor Roy Suddaby (University of Alberta), incoming editor of Academy of Management Review, and Professor Bob Vandenberg (University of Georgia), outgoing editor of Organizational Research Methods.

Dr. Bob Taylor, Chair
Department of Management

Department of Management Information Systems

The Department of Management Information Systems (MIS) has several major initiatives underway. Two initiatives discussed here include the online degree program and a Department of Defense grant received by a Professor Judy Simon.

The MIS department is among those in the College now offering an undergraduate degree program online. Currently there are about 300 students enrolled in online classes, and the course selection is expanding: two-thirds of the MIS classes are online. All courses and elements will be phased in by spring 2012.

Students can earn an online BBA degree with a concentration in MIS. Dr. Thomas Meservy, the online coordinator for the department, views online classes as preparation for working in a knowledge economy: “interacting in virtual teams is not a new concept and will continue to be very important...It is inevitable that these students will learn many useful skills from online classes.” Dr. Brian Janz is pioneering social networking in the Department as a way to develop courses to be more realistic and interactive.

Common misconceptions of online classes are that they are drastically different from the traditional class. However, the same professors that teach the traditional classes are also teaching the online classes. Consistency of content is important whether courses are taken online or in a classroom. Each course is developed according to a checklist with faculty certified to match online certification standards.

Dr. Judy Simon, Co-Director of the Center for Information Assurance and Professor of MIS, was awarded a Department of Defense grant designed to increase the number of faculty and students who have knowledge of cyber security topics. The grant provides funds for four part-time student workers each semester (fall, spring, and summer) to work on developing cyber security content modules for four graduate MIS courses that are a part of the department’s Business Information Assurance (BIA) certificate program.

The modules being developed will be designed as online modules, with a long-term goal of making entire course content available online for all four MIS courses in the BIA certificate program.

Department of Marketing & Supply Chain Management

The Department of Marketing and Supply Chain Management faculty and students continue to be engaged in a variety of activities and scholarship. From student organizations, to academic conferences, to publications in top journals, the department is active and visible in the Memphis community and the academic discipline. We are also committed to providing the most relevant materials in the discipline and continually evaluate our programs to ensure that they reflect the most current thinking in the business world. Our highly distinguished Departmental Advisory Board, led by newly elected chair Elizabeth Olim, President of Olim International, continues to play a key role in departmental curriculum matters in both marketing and supply chain management.

Our department is completing its roll-out of online courses in support of the online Marketing Management Major. As of this fall, students will be able to complete the full major online. Realizing that many students still prefer the classroom setting, the department remains dedicated to continuing its quality instruction on-ground, as well as on-line. Our next move is to take the Supply Chain Management Major fully online as well.

Our highly active Supply Chain Management Student Association (SCMSA) continually reaches out to companies around the Memphis area to make connections and provide students with insight into careers in logistics/supply chain management. The year began with the election of new officers: Anthony Jordan, President; Allen Marter, Vice President; Dennis Kouch, Secretary; Anthony Lipford, Information Technology; Jon Bienz, Finance; and Creighton Douglas, Public Relations. In addition, guest speaker, Jade Manning, HR Representative from Exel Inc. provided insight into Exel’s practices, offered advice for interview techniques, and shared internship opportunities. She also brought additional guests to give the students additional insight into the field of supply chain management. SCMSA also has events planned with Cummins Inc.

Several of our doctoral students are busily involved with research, dissertations, interviewing and moving on to their first positions. Placements include Fordham University, East Carolina University and Texas A&M-Kingsville. At the same time, they are active in many research projects with several papers published or accepted, including one in the prestigious Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science. Faculty members have also been busy publishing even as they spend considerable time in developing their online courses. And the department is particularly proud of Dr. Emin Babakus who, as you can read about later in the magazine, was selected as one of the recipients of the 2011 Alumni Association Distinguished Teaching Award.

18TH ANNUAL ALUMNI DAY LUNCHEON

The FCBE Alumni Chapter’s 18th Annual Alumni Luncheon brought together hundreds of our alumni, friends, faculty, and staff. Keynote speaker, Anita Vaughn, a lifetime member of the alumni association and CEO of Baptist Memorial Hospital for Women, opened with an update on healthcare reform and closed with a recruitment campaign. “What we need are more dreamers and thinkers and doers who are true blue,” Vaughn said. “Send ‘em on.”

The year’s honorees included Outstanding Alumnus of the Year George Johnson, President of BJB Administrative Services, an asset management and accounting services firm. Prior to founding BJB, among other things, he served as the Vice President of Care Inns, Inc., a locally owned entity that owned and operated nursing home facilities. He is currently an Ambassador of the U of M Athletic Department and a Life Member of the Alumni Association. “Being so recognized by the College, at the time that so many great programs are developing within the College by its fine administration, is very gratifying and I am so happy to be a small part in contributing to some of these valuable initiatives being undertaken” said Johnson.

The Outstanding Young Alumnus is Andrew Bailey, marketing specialist adviser at FedEx who manages the interactive/email platform for the FedEx enterprise. Under his leadership, FedEx has recently completed a global integration of all its email operations allowing for more targeted campaigns. Former SGA President, Mr. U of M and Greek Man of the Year, Bailey is a Life Member of the Alumni Association, President of the Luther C. McClellan Alumni Chapter, serves on the LEAD Advisory Board, and is committee chair of the EMBA Alumni Council.

FedEx Senior Marketing Vice President Laurie Tucker congratulates Outstanding Young Alumnus Andrew Bailey.

Distinguished Friend of the College Harry Smith and his wife Beth.
J. Austin Baker II was named Entrepreneur of the Year. Baker founded EServ, an employee benefits firm, while in college. In 2007, EServ won “Small Business of the Year” at the annual Small Business Chamber awards. His latest venture, HRO Partners, a human resource outsourcing company, is set to launch soon and will offer HR resources to small and mid-market companies. Baker is the incoming President of the Memphis Chapter of the Society for Human Resource Management, a Life Member of the Alumni Association, a Society of the Shield member and was a Top40Under40 Award Recipient in 2009.

The Distinguished Friend of the College is Harry Smith, an Executive-in-Residence at the FCBE. Between 1980-2005 he was the Chairman and CEO of Schilling Companies, Inc., a firm that owned and operated several companies including automobile dealerships, real estate firms, and trucking companies. Smith was also a partner in a Public Accounting firm and sits on several for-profit and not-for-profit boards. Smith commented, “I am thankful to have the opportunity to serve on the U of M BOV/Foundation and on the advisory executive committee of the FCBE. I am thankful for the privilege of working with Dean Grover, his staff, and faculty as an Executive-in-Residence and to be a part of the ethics initiative.”

The FCBE Alumni Chapter would like to thank everyone involved for putting on a wonderful Alumni Day Luncheon. If you are a University of Memphis graduate, a former or current student, a friend, or a loyal Tiger fan, then you, your friends and your family are welcome to join the University of Memphis Alumni Association.

FCBE AWARDS

FCBE’S AWARD WINNERS

Once again, this has been a year when several of our faculty have received recognition for their scholarship, teaching, and service. Professor Julie Heath’s award as the 2010 Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching Tennessee Professor of the Year has been highlighted elsewhere in the Focus. In this section, we acknowledge several of our other award recipients.

Marla Stafford Receives First Tennessee Professorship

Marla Stafford, Chair of the Department of Marketing & Supply Chain Management has been awarded a First Tennessee Professorship, one of the University of Memphis’ leading scholarly awards. The First Tennessee Professorships were established early in 2005 as part of a partnership between the First Tennessee Foundation and University of Memphis to help the University recruit and retain outstanding faculty and to support economic and financial literacy programs. Marla is just concluding her term as the editor of the Journal of Advertising, which is a highly respected scholarly journal. She continues to serve on a number of editorial review boards and actively represents the institution at major conferences. She continues to publish even under her current heavy workload as department chair and editor, and has consistently been seen as one of the most inspiring teachers in the College.

Emin Babakus Receives Distinguished Teaching Award

Professor Emin Babakus, Professor of Marketing in the Department of Marketing and Supply Chain Management, has been announced as a 2011 University of Memphis’ Distinguished Teaching Award recipient. This is outstanding recognition for a gifted instructor, whose student evaluations consistently highlight him as an excellent teacher. Department Chair Marla Stafford commented, “His high evaluations are particularly noteworthy given that Dr. Babakus teaches some of the more difficult, quantitative marketing classes that are often feared by the students...Moreover, despite the challenging nature of these courses, his students complete the classes with considerable enthusiasm and knowledge, along with a new appreciation for marketing research and the value of statistics.” Dr. Babakus joins a long line of winners of the DTA from the FCBE, including Julie Heath in 2010.

Charlene Spiceland Wins Briggs Teaching Award

Charlene Spiceland, instructor in the School of Accountancy, has won a Thomas W. Briggs Foundation Excellence in Teaching Award. This is a highly prestigious award that was established by the Thomas W. Briggs Foundation to recognize outstanding educators for their positive impact on undergraduate teaching. In supporting Charlene’s application, Director of the School of Accountancy Professor Carolyn Callahan stated, “Charlene has a natural gift for teaching based on her innate compassion for her students, her willingness to meet students’ needs and her focus on excellence in class room delivery. On the personal side, she is a very supportive colleague with a great sense of humor, a team player with a strong work ethic. Her optimism and positive attitude is contagious in the School of Accountancy.” As an outstanding teacher, Charlene’s recognition is very well deserved, and, following Irv Tankersley’s success, is the second Briggs award to come to the School of Accountancy in two years.

2010-2011 SUZANNE DOWNS PALMER PROFESSORSHIP AWARDS

The Suzanne Downs Palmer Professorship Awards Program was established in 2003 by alumnuus Dan Palmer in appreciation to his U of M education in the business school and in memory of his wife, Suzanne. The purpose of the Palmer Awards is to recognize outstanding individual faculty contributions to achieving the mission of the Fogelman College of Business & Economics. Awards can be given in three categories: Teaching, Research, and Service.

This year’s winners were recommended by a selection committee of nine previous Palmer Award winners.

Each recipient received a recognition plaque and a cash award of $10,000.

Research Category – Dr. Robin S. Poston, Associate Professor of Management Information Systems

Dr. Robin Poston has been acknowledged by her colleagues as an outstanding researcher, with the Palmer Committee noting her “sustained and exemplary research/scholarship” over the last three years. This has resulted in two papers in A+ranked journals, one paper in an
A-ranked journal and six papers in B-ranked journals, and twelve conference papers. In 2007, Robin was a finalist for Management Information Systems Quarterly Reviewer of the Year (an A+ journal), is associate editor at two leading MIS conferences, and sits on the editorial/advisory boards for three leading journals: Decision Sciences Journal (A+), Journal of Database Management (A), and Journal of Organizational and End User Computing (B).

Service Category – John M. Malloy, Professor of Taxation
In the service category, the Palmer Committee recognized Professor John Malloy for his outstanding and consistent service to the university, the accounting discipline, and the community. John was Acting Director of the School of Accountancy in 2008, a period when he also developed the curriculum of the MBA concentration in entrepreneurship. John has served as a judge for the Memphs Business Journal Small Business Awards for the last six years and as an advisor for Beta Alpha Psi for seven years. He has spent most Saturdays during the tax season for the last eight years as VITA coordinator in which he supervises free preparation of tax returns for low income taxpayers. John is an active member of the Memphis Rotary Club, serving on several committees, is President of the Memphis Chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, has served as a member and Chair of various University, College, and School committees and is also a member of the Tennessee Tax Structure Committee. He has also directed the University’s Small Business Development Center. John was also recognized by the University of Memphis’ Golden Key Chapter as an Honorary Member in 2008.

Teaching Category – Dr. Julia A. Heath, Professor of Economics
In addition to her Carnegie Award, Julie Heath has also been recognized as one of the most outstanding teachers in the FCBE. The quality of her teaching has been recognized by her consistently excellent student evaluations (SIRS and SETE) across a wide variety of courses, from undergraduate to doctoral courses. Julie is regularly described as intelligent, passionate, organized, caring, and patient. It is not at all uncommon for students to describe her as “the best professor I’ve ever had.” Notably, Julie’s work transcends the College and even the campus: through workshops, Dr. Heath has trained more than 8,000 West Tennessee teachers, from grades K-12, on how to integrate economic and financial literacy into their classes. She has also been recognized nationally with an invitation to serve as one of five economists nationwide on the National Assessment of Education Progress committee on economics. Not surprisingly, Julie has received numerous teaching awards, including the Alumni Association’s Distinguished Teaching Award, The Thomas W. Briggs Foundation Excellence in Teaching Award, The University Honors Teacher of the Year Award, and the Elzinga Award, the economic discipline’s highest recognition of teaching excellence.

2010-2011 FCBE BEST PAPER AWARDS

FOLGELMAN FOCUS | SPRING 2011
NEW FACULTY AND PROMOTION

New Appointment: Dr. Shana (Hyun A) Hong, School of Accountancy

Shana (Hyun A) Hong joined the School of Accountancy faculty in fall 2010 to teach financial accounting. Shana received her M.S. in statistics from Stanford University, and her Ph.D. in accounting from the University of Southern California in May 2010. She is interested in financial and international empirical economics-based research in accounting and finance. Her dissertation, "Does Mandatory Adoption of IFRS Decrease the Voting Premium for Dual-Class Shares?" investigates whether the IFRS mandate benefits minority shareholders by providing a monitoring mechanism of controlling parties’ diversionary behavior. Shana has also been highly productive in generating research papers while earning her Ph.D. at the University of Southern California. One of these papers has been nominated as one of the top 10 downloaded papers in several sections of the Social Science Research Network (SSRN).

New Appointment: Dr. Janet L. Souza, School of Accountancy

Janet L. Souza joined the School of Accountancy faculty in fall 2010 to teach in the auditing area. Janet (JL) received her Ph.D. from The Pennsylvania State University, 2010. She has an MBA from Babson College (Boston). Her dissertation research work, “Differences in Selection and Manipulation of Alternate Loan Performance Pricing Measures,” bridges both the finance and accounting literatures and draws upon her strong intuitive industry knowledge. Unlike in previous earnings management studies, this is a setting in which the manipulation has a direct effect on cash flows. JL has strong experience in external and internal auditing, including working as an auditor for Arthur Andersen and as a Senior Internal Auditor at the Bank of Stockton in California. While completing her degree, based on her expertise in the banking industry, Janet also has generated major research papers that examine risk and cost issues associated with loan pricing.

Steven C. Bourassa

Steven C. Bourassa is the Martha and Robert Fogelman Family Chair of Excellence in Sustainable Real Estate in the Fogelman College of Business & Economics at the University of Memphis. Prior to joining the faculty at the University of Memphis, he was the KHC Real Estate Research Professor at the University of Louisville, where he worked for 12 years. Prior to that, he was professor and head of the Department of Property at the University of Auckland, New Zealand. He also served on the faculties of the University of Sydney and the Australian National University. His first teaching position was in the city and regional planning program at Memphis State University in the late 1980s.

His research focuses on urban housing and land markets and policy. Dr. Bourassa is the co-editor, with Yu-Hung Hong, of Leasing Public Land: Policy Debates and International Experiences, published by the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy in 2003. His research has explored home ownership rates in the United States and other countries, the use of community land trusts to provide affordable housing, methods for constructing house price indexes, and land taxation as an economic development tool. His interests in sustainable real estate range from measuring the costs and benefits of environmentally sensitive real estate development to finding ways to make housing and commercial real estate more stable forms of investment.

Dr. Bourassa is on the editorial boards of the Journal of Sustainable Real Estate, Journal of Housing Research, Journal of Property Research, Journal of Real Estate Research, International Real Estate Review, and Journal of European Real Estate Research. He is treasurer of the International Real Estate Society and associate executive director of the American Real Estate Society. He holds bachelor’s and master’s degrees from the University of Delaware and Temple University, respectively, and a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania, where he studied city planning, real estate, and regional science.

Promotion to Professor: Dr. David Allen, Department of Management

Dr. David G. Allen (Ph.D. Georgia State University) has been promoted to Full Professor. His primary research interests include the flow of people into and out of organizations, and his research on these topics has been published in Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Applied Psychology, Journal of Management, Journal of Organizational Behavior, Organizational Research Methods, and other outlets. Dr. Allen is a three-time recipient of a Suzanne Downs Palmer Professorship award for research, and in 2008 was awarded a First Tennessee Professorship. He teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in human resource management and research methods, and has worked with organizations such as ALSAC-St. Jude, Campbell Clinic, Georgia Department of Family and Children Services, First Tennessee, Harrah’s Entertainment, and the U.S. Navy. He was awarded the 2008 HR Excellence Award by the Tennessee State SHRM Council and named to the Memphis Business Journal 2008 Top 40 Under 40. Allen serves as Associate Editor for Human Resource Management Review and is on the editorial board of Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Management, Personnel Psychology, and Human Resource Management. He is 2010
Past President of SHRM-Memphis, and was recently elected to the Division Chair Track for the HR Division of the Academy of Management.

Promotion to Associate Professor with Tenure: Dr. George Deitz

George Deitz has been granted tenure and promoted to Associate Professor in the Department of Marketing & Supply Chain Management. George received his Ph.D. in Marketing from The University of Alabama in 2005. His research interests include channels management, dynamic capabilities theory, and multilevel structural equation modeling. His work has been featured in various scholarly journals and conferences including: Industrial Marketing Management, Journal of Business Venturing, and the Journal of Public Policy & Marketing.

Promotion to Associate Professor with Tenure: Dr. Sandra Mortal

Sandra Mortal has been granted tenure and promoted to Associate Professor in the Department of Finance, Insurance and Real Estate. Sandra joined the University of Memphis in 2008 as an Assistant Professor of finance. Before joining University of Memphis, Sandra taught finance at various universities. She regularly publishes her work in leading professional journals and is currently on leave at the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

SPOTLIGHT ON GIVING

Donors are the lifeblood of Fogelman College. Without the generous support of alumni and the Greater Memphis business community, the College would not be able to grow and move forward with initiatives, such as Fogelman Promise or the proposed second phase of development, that are putting us on par with the top business schools in the country. Even more importantly, without donor support, fewer students would be able to take advantage of these initiatives.

Here, we spotlight two donors whose gifts have made a major difference in the life of the FCBE and our students.

Spiceland Family Endows Accountancy Fund

The family of Professor Emeritus Jesse W. Spiceland has made a generous gift to create the Professor Jesse W. Spiceland Endowed Graduate Scholarship for the School of Accountancy. The endowed fund will be awarded to a first year graduate student enrolled in the School of Accountancy masters program.

Professor Jesse Spiceland taught at the University for more than 40 years. During his tenure, he taught every accounting course in the curriculum, as well as several courses in other College departments. Through the years, he served not only as Department Chair, but as a member of virtually every College and University committee. In addition to his job as a professor, he was the owner and operator of Maywood Pool, a beach and recreation park in Olive Branch, Miss.

Professor Spiceland passed down his passion for the University of Memphis to his family. Professor David Spiceland, son of Jesse Spiceland, has taught in the School of Accountancy for the past 29 years. David’s wife, Charlene (M.Ed ’86 and M.S. ’00), serves as an instructor in the same School. Carol Warren (BBA ’75), a daughter of Professor Jesse Spiceland, is the University...

Bursar. Professor Spiceland also has a granddaughter (Jessica) and a son-in-law (Ron) who have earned accounting degrees from the University of Memphis. Daughters Susan and Kathy somehow eluded the lure of accounting.

"Dad has been a positive influence on the lives and careers of so many students," David Spiceland says. "With the creation of the Professor Jesse W. Spiceland Endowed Graduate Scholarship, his influence will continue on in perpetuity for future accounting students." Granddaughter Laura Rach proudly adds: "What a perfect tribute to a man who has championed our family’s education and taught and influenced so many throughout the community."

The Fogelman College and the University of Memphis would like to thank the Spiceland family for its generous gift. If you would like to make a donation to the Professor Jesse W. Spiceland Endowed Scholarship, please contact E. Kenneth Siegfried, Director of Development, at 901-678-3068 or k.siegfried@memphis.edu.

Donor Wei Chen to Make Round-the-World Flight

University of Memphis alumnus and local businessman Wei Chen (IMBA ’98) first made headlines for the FCBE in 2008 when his generous commitment to the College gave rise to the Sunshine Enterprise Scholars Fund. The fund provides scholarships for International Masters of Business Administration (IMBA) students in the College.

Now Chen — founder of Memphis-based Sunshine Enterprises Inc., an international manufacturing and distribution firm — is placing his alma mater in the spotlight once again. On May 22, Chen embarked on a 70-day flight around the world; he will become the first Chinese citizen to complete this goal. Called Hope Flight, the trip is designed to celebrate the first 100 years of flight, introduce Memphis and the University to 1.3 billion Chinese citizens and, most importantly, raise funds and awareness for the children of St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital. "I think (St. Jude) is a great asset for Memphis, and what it does for children is incredible," Chen says. "I think this is an opportunity to raise awareness for St. Jude in the Chinese community and around the world."

Chen is seeking to raise $250,000 for St. Jude through the expedition. In addition to the fundraising aspect of his trip, Chen hopes to build recognition for his city and his beloved alma mater. "I'm a by-product of Memphis," he says. "I came to Memphis for my education at Fogelman and I got a scholarship. My wife got a scholarship at the engineering school. Without those scholarships, I don't think we'd have ever met. What Memphis and the school did for us was not just generous, but life-changing."

Chen came to the United States in 1996 to earn a graduate degree. His company, Sunshine Enterprises, has two manufacturing facilities in China, a main office and distribution facility in Memphis and branch offices in Los Angeles, Houston, Atlanta and New York. It has been named as one of the fastest growing companies in the U.S. by Inc. Magazine. In 2007, Chen was named as Memphis Business Journal’s Executive of the Year and in 2009, he was named Entrepreneur of Year by Fogelman College.

Chen will pilot private jets and cover all flight expenses for his round-the-world trip, which he says is every pilot’s dream.

"It’s a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," he says.

For more information about Chen’s Earthrournding mission and a send-off fundraising event set for May 21, please visit www.stjude.org/weichen.

GIVING STUDENTS THE SKILLS TO SUCCEED

The Student Professional Development Endowed Fund, established by George T. Johnson (BBA ’70) and Betty Johnson (M.Ed ’75), supports initiatives created to advance the professional development of FCBE students. One of these initiatives is Fogelman Promise, a seven-prong initiative that aims to prepare students for life after college and help them thrive in the business world.

Fogelman Promise goes beyond the classroom to train students in areas such as business etiquette, professionalism, fitness and ethics. From a firm handshake to a confident tone, students who complete the Promise program will enter the workforce with the skills they need to become valuable employees and responsible citizens.

As an alum, your dollars can make a real difference to the success of this initiative and programs like it. Supporting Student Professional Development strengthens the community, improves the College’s reputation and ultimately increases the value of your degree.

For more information about the Fogelman Promise or the Student Professional Development Fund, please contact Ziggy Siegfried at 901/678-3068 or ksiegfrd@memphis.edu. You can make a gift to the Fogelman College by using the enclosed envelope, or by visiting www.memphis.edu/giving.
