Trend Analysis
The Educatve Teacher Performance Assessment (edTPA) serves as the capstone project for all Initial Licensure candidates at the University of Memphis and now the State of Tennessee. The three Tasks are externally, blind-scored according to 15 rubrics. 75 points are possible. Our passing score 42 (15 rubrics) or 38 for World Languages with 13 rubrics; the highest of any EPP in Tennessee, before we recommend candidates for licensure. The state score is 40 for portfolios with 15 rubrics and 37 for portfolios with 13 rubrics. The state requirements will rise to the same level as our requirements in January 2022. It was originally scheduled to increase in January 2021, but was pushed back due to the COVID-19 Pandemic.

The edTPA was not a required assessment in TN until January 1, 2019 but the University of Memphis has required the exam for licensure for all candidates since 2014. Data from the past years has shown a steady uptick in the average scores and the percent who pass by the second try. Our pass rate is the highest yet at 98.9% by the state scores. Our average composite score for 15 rubrics is 48 for undergraduates and 46 for MAT candidates.

PRAXIS Assessments are also required for licensure in Tennessee. Our pass rates are based on up to two tries per student per Standardized exam are just under the state averages.

Educative Teacher Performance Assessment (edTPA) Data
Data show that our graduate and undergraduate candidates positively affect student learning through the completion of the Educatve Teacher Performance Assessment (edTPA).

PRAXIS Principles of Learning and Teaching Pass Rates and PRAXIS Subject Assessments Pass Rates
Data show that our completers score near or above the state average.
- The edTPA has replaced the Principles of Teaching and Learning Exam as a required licensure pedagogical exam but some candidates have taken the Principles of Teaching and Learning Exam.
- The PRAXIS Subject Assessments vary by licensure and may include multiple required content area exams.
