Academic Genres and Scholarly Publishing

English 7/8001

Open to graduate students from any discipline!

This course introduces students to the genres, styles, and modes of academic writing and publishing. From conference proposals, to book reviews, to calls for papers, to query letters, we will examine the structures and conventions of those genres that academics navigate. More importantly, we will experiment with methods for composing in these genres while developing a set of best practices tailored to each students' particular goals at this stage in their careers.
