Tips from Our Students:

“If you will need a roommate, begin looking early. Use the law school Facebook page for your class and the school as a great starting point.”

“Consider checking Condominium complexes. Often times they do not list units they have for rent publically, but it can be a sneaky way to find a great place.”

“A benefit of living so close is that rarely do I have to bring work home. This subtly helps to keep in balance the two worlds with which every law student struggles.”

“Not living Downtown is really not a big deal at all. It only takes me 10-15 minutes to drive that direction, and the rent is much cheaper. I found a very quiet, relatively small apartment complex with Madison East and couldn't be happier. After my lease was up, they did not require me to sign a new one, so I am only a month-to-month tenant.”

“Try to live close to the law school. Commuting one hour per day takes away one hour of study time. That may be worth an extra $100/month in the long run.”

“If your family lives here, live at home! No need to waste money (no idea where it would come from anyway since you can't have a job!) and time. Plus you don't have to waste time cooking, etc. so you can spend that time studying! (If you have nice parents to cook from you...)”

“I live in High Point Terrace and love the neighborhood, plus it's relatively convenient to all areas of Memphis. It is family and dog-friendly. It has the Green Line to Shelby Farms, a delicious pizza place, and a great grocery store with a fantastic butcher. I would recommend this area especially for married students, students with kids, students that don't want to live Downtown, and students who have roommates.”

“Living within walking distance of the school is invaluable. You're able to pick up your stuff and go to school, go home, go to the bar, go home from the bar, run home because you forgot something, run home to let your dog out, etc...People who don't live Downtown wish they lived Downtown. Living on Mud Island is not within walking distance. Also, don't let online reviews affect your feelings about a certain neighborhoods or building. Ask real people for insight. Ask other law students.”

“Living Downtown was a good transition to Memphis for the first year when you are going to be spending a majority of your time at school. For the second year, I have found that living in Midtown offers you the ability to get more space for your money and be closer to amenities. Additionally, living in Midtown offers a good balance with short drives to the law school and main campus.”

“Finding a house in Midtown or East Memphis is an excellent choice. The commute is nice, and everything is much more convenient than living downtown. It's better for married students than non-married.”

“Living Downtown, you are able to walk everywhere including school. I didn't realize Memphis downtown was that small or 'walkable' before moving here. This makes life so convenient!
