

RESEARCH AREAS

Students in our MSGP and PhD programs complete empirically-based milestone projects under the mentorship of one of the faculty. Faculty members' research interests span a vast array of topics, from animal-based lab research to applied intervention studies with clinical samples.

The Department of Psychology is Comprised of Five Research Areas:

- Behavioral Neuroscience
- Clinical Health Psychology
- Child and Family Studies
- Cognitive Psychology
- Psychotherapy Research

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

The Department of Psychology offers five graduate programs:

Master's Programs

- Master of Science in General Psychology (MSGP)
- MA/EdS in School Psychology

PhD Programs

- Clinical Psychology
- Experimental Psychology
- School Psychology

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Alumni of our graduate programs are all over the world. Many of our PhD graduates are employed as faculty members and research scientists. Our School Psychology graduates are employed in school districts throughout the region. Students in our Clinical Psychology PhD program typically leave Memphis for prestigious internships and then pursue postdoctoral fellowships.

Students work closely with faculty mentors on empirically-based projects. To learn more about the specific interests of each faculty member, visit memphis.edu/psychology/people/index.php.
