

Through every part of life that we walk through there's a journey. When God plants his seeds here on this Earth, we have to push up through the dirt and grow. And you see these flowers coming up through these rocks? That's the hard times. And it's gonna be a lot easier. And as the sun shines down on us, that's gonna make us sprout and spread our wings. It gets a little easier and a little easier as time goes on.

I feel good about myself and my strength is my family.

I'm grateful for life. And I'm grateful that my son is graduating this year from college with an accounting degree and a business management degree. He kept telling me mama you need to go back to school. I kept putting it off and putting it off. I decided to go back to school August of last year.

A red tiny home which stands alone. We are not alone.

I'm back in school.
